Changi Chapel and Museum

Changi Chapel and Museum (CCM) tells the story of the prisoners of war and civilians interned in Changi prison camp during the Japanese Occupation. Managed by HeritageSG, CCM features artefacts, stories, and personal objects presented in an intimate and engaging format. The museum's narrative is centred on remembrance and reflection, encouraging visitors to contemplate both the hardships that the internees underwent, as well as their courage and resilience in the face of difficulties.

Come experience the Changi Chapel and Museum and be inspired by its legacy.

Introduction

In 1942, tens of thousands of prisoners of war (POWs) and civilians were interned in Changi prison camp during the Japanese Occupation. They would be imprisoned for the next three and a half years, and often relied on their ingenuity and strength of spirit to survive. The exhibition spans eight main sections that delve into the daily lives of the internees, their responses to the challenges that they faced, and their eventual liberation.

Changi Chapel

Modelled after St George's Church, the chapel was one of the numerous churches built by the prisoners of war in Changi during their internment. It was started by Reverend Eric Cordingley, who presided over it for the rest of the war. A second version of the church was built at Kanchanaburi when POWs were sent to work on the Thai-Burma Railway, and two more versions were rebuilt at Changi Gaol by the returning POWs. In all of its iterations, the church continued to provide hope and comfort to the men who attended its services.

1 Changi Fortress

This section introduces the history of Changi, which in the 19th century was largely covered by mangrove swamps and rainforests. In the 1920s, this quiet idyll began to change as the British started to construct batteries and barracks to protect Singapore from attack.

2 Fallen Fortress

Less than three months after the Japanese invasion of Malaya in December 1941, Singapore capitulated. This section covers the fall of Singapore as well as the fate that soldiers and civilians alike faced in the aftermath.

3 The Interned

Approximately 48,000 soldiers and civilians were marched to Changi, which was converted into a vast prison camp. Learn more about the stories of the men, women, and children who were interned in Changi in this section.

4 Life as Prisoners of War

In this section, enter an exact replica of a Changi prison cell and listen to conversations on the day-to-day lives of those imprisoned in Changi.

5 Resilience in Adversity

The internees made the best of their difficult circumstances, using their resourcefulness and ingenuity to overcome challenges. This section offers a glimpse into both the hardships that the internees faced as well as how they responded to their situation.

6 Creativity in Adversity

Creative expression was deeply important to the internees, who found ways to write, draw, read, craft, play sports, and even stage concerts and plays. Discover how they kept their morale up in this section.

7 Liberation

Japan surrendered on 15 August 1945, bringing an end to the three and a half years of the Japanese Occupation of Singapore. This section captures the internees' feelings about their liberation as well as what happened immediately after the war.

8 Legacies

The legacy of Changi camp continues to live on in the present day. In this concluding section, look up the names and stories of the internees, and view some artefacts that were produced to remember how they had survived the internment.
